About....

Connie Schultz

Connie Schultz, a biweekly columnist for the Cleveland Plain Dealer/Creators Syndicate, won the Pulitzer Prize for commentary in 2005.

Her other awards include the Scripps-Howard National Journalism Award, the National Headliners Award, the James Batten Medal, and the Robert F. Kennedy Award for social-justice reporting.

Her narrative series “The Burden of Innocence,” which chronicled the life of a man wrongly incarcerated for rape, was a Pulitzer Prize finalist.

Connie Schultz is married to Ohio’s junior senator, Sherrod Brown, and has two children and two stepchildren.
