About...

Adam Clymer

Adam Clymer retired in July, 2003 as chief Washington correspondent of The New York Times, where he wrote on major issues in government and politics from privacy to campaign finance. The American Political Science Association honored him that year with its Carey McWilliams Award for distinguished correspondence. Previously, he had been Washington editor of The Times from 1997 through 1999. Before that, he was assistant Washington editor, in charge of coverage of Congress, since 1991. In that position, he won the 1993 Everett McKinley Dirksen Award for distinguished reporting on Congress.

He was The Times' senior editor for weekends in 1990, responsible for the planning for the main news sections on Sunday and Monday and he managed the newsrooms on weekends. He had also been The Times' political editor for the 1988 presidential campaign, and its polling editor from 1983 through 1990, supervising news polling and The Times' Best Seller List.

Clymer joined The Times in Washington in 1977, reporting extensively on Congress, public opinion and politics and was The Times' national political correspondent in the 1980 presidential campaign.

Mr. Clymer also worked for The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot from 1960 to 1963, The Baltimore Sun from 1963 through 1976 and The New York Daily News in 1977. On The Sun, he was a foreign correspondent in Moscow, reporting the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev, and New Delhi, and covered the White House, Congress, the Supreme Court and national politics, and won awards for coverage of the court and of the decline and fall of the Nixon Administration.

After his retirement from The Times, he served until July, 2005 as political director of the National Annenberg Election Survey, a project of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Public Policy Center. He was the spokesman and a chief analyst for the presidential election poll.

Clymer has written two books, edited another and contributed to two more. His highly praised Edward M. Kennedy: A Biography was published in 1999 by William Morrow & Co. In 2008, his Drawing the Line at the Big Ditch: The Panama Canal Treaties and the Rise of the Right, was published by the University Press of Kansas. He edited The New York Times Year in Review, 1986, published in 1987, and contributed to Reagan: The Man, The President, a book by Times reporters published in 1981. In 2008 he contributed a chapter to William E. Mayer's The Swing Voter in American Politics, published by Brookings Institution Press.

Born in New York City on April 27, 1937, Clymer graduated from the Walden School in 1954. In 1958 he earned his A.B. degree from Harvard College magna cum laude. In 1959 he studied at the University of Cape Town in South Africa on a Frank Knox Fellowship. In 2005 the University of Vermont awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters "as one of the great political journalists of your generation."

Clymer is married to Ann Fessenden Clymer and lives in Washington, D.C., in an apartment once occupied by Dwight and Mamie Eisenhower, when Major Eisenhower was an aide to General Douglas MacArthur at the War Department. He is a member of the National Press Club and the Delhi Golf Club and a dedicated fly fisherman.

The Muncy Journalism & Politics Lecture series has been generously endowed by KU alumnus Martha E. "Betty" Muncy (BA '41), retired owner, publisher and editor of the Dodge City Daily Globe. The Muncy Lectures bring renowned speakers to the Dole Institute to address the ever-changing relationship between politics, policymaking and the media.
